Dr. Elizabeth Vargis to Present at TEDxUSU | College of Engineering

08/12/2016

Aug. 12, 2016 – Assistant Professor of Biological Engineering Dr. Elizabeth Vargis will present at this year's TEDxUSU. Now in its fifth year, TEDxUSU will be held Oct. 28 in the Manon Caine Russell Kathryn Caine Wanlass Performance Hall on USU's Logan campus.

About Elizabeth

Elizabeth Vargis is an Assistant Professor of Biological Engineering at Utah State University. One dream of hers is to name her lab the Batman Lab, and is currently accepting suggestions for an excellent acronym. She began her studies at UC Berkeley, receiving Bachelor's degree in Bioengineering while working at the Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory. Her education then took her southeast to Vanderbilt University to get a Master's and PhD, both in Biomedical Engineering.

She completed her postdoctoral appointment at Oak Ridge National Lab in the Center for Nanophase Materials Sciences and at UT Knoxville at the Joint Institute of Biological Sciences.

Dr. Vargis currently lives in Logan, UT with her partner, daughter and dogs. They enjoy hiking, eating, dancing... and eating some more. She is well known for her dedication to her student's progression in research and helping them achieve their career goals.
